

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

As announced in the Sept. ANALYST, this No. will terminate the publication, under its present management. We had hoped to be able, in this issue, to answer the many inquiries that have been made as to its probable continuance, by a definite announcement of a publication to take its place, under favorable auspices and an able management, as several gentlemen of acknowledged ability, and well and favorably known by all mathematicians and astronomers, both in this country and in Europe, have expressed a willingness to assume the labor and responsibility of continuing the publication; but, as the arrangements for its continuance appear to be still incomplete, we have not been authorized to make a definite announcement. We feel confident, however, from the correspondence we have had on the subject, that the work will not be abandoned but will be placed on a permanent basis, under a management that will insure its usefulness and success. And we earnestly solicit, for the new publication, the active assistance and patronage of all our readers.

In conclusion, we desire to tender our sincerest thanks to our patrons and contributors for their continued support during the ten years life of the ANALYST, and especially for their kind words and manifestations of interest in our personal welfare.

EDITOR.